

Lecture Invitation for "Lehman is Dead – Long Live Lehman!"

Should we mourn or celebrate at this second Anniversary of Lehman's collapse?
Did Lehman die in vain or was it a martyr to a good cause?

A Key Note Lecture by well-known finance expert and ex-Lehman Banker Sony Kapoor, Managing Director, Re-Define (<http://www.re-define.org>)

Date: Tuesday, 14. September 2010, 7.30 – 9.30 pm

Location: Beletage of the Heinrich Böll Foundation, Schumannstraße 8, Berlin-Mitte
Free admission

It's the second anniversary of a crash that is widely believed to have triggered the Global Financial and Economic Crisis. The world financial system and economy have lurched from one crisis to another since that fateful day that people woke up to the news of Lehman Brothers, a large US Investment Bank having filed for bankruptcy.

The two intervening years have been full of rhetoric and short on real change. International finance expert and Managing Director of the Think Tank Re-Define, Sony Kapoor, who had once worked for Lehman will deliver a Key Note Lecture open to the interested public on the

- The Lessons from the Collapse of Lehman
- The Events that have unfolded in the last two years
- The Agenda for Financial, Fiscal and Economic Reform
- Where has real action taken place and what is merely rhetoric
- The Prognosis for the Future of Finance and the Future of the European Economy

There will be a possibility for the audience to ask questions and further discuss these topics with Mr. Kapoor. Re-Define's Book "The Financial Crisis – Causes and Cures" will also be available for FREE at the lecture venue.

SONY KAPOOR's career uniquely spans the private sector, civil society and public policy across several countries. In his current role as Managing Director of Re-Define (Rethinking Development, Finance & Environment), an international Think Tank, he is helping shape the fiscal, macroeconomic and financial regulatory reforms agenda through providing independent and incisive advice to key policymakers around the world. Sony Kapoor has a professional background in commercial and investment banking, has worked extensively as an adviser to international NGOs and trade unions and advises several governments and international organizations such as the UN and the World Bank on key policy and strategic issues. In particular he works on reforming the financial system, improving governance and fostering sustainable development.
